The pattern is Monster Mash-up from Cindy Rodenmayer of FatCat Patterns. It's one of her many freebies. I'd been a little hesitant to do this type of applique so when Cindy offered this pattern as a Sew-along, I jumped in. It's an easy pattern and was a great way to get my feet wet. The applique is by machine, but manually controlled. The quilting is stitch in the ditch to hold the layers together. Then I scanned each block into my Dream Machine and created the quilting in My Design Center. These are built-in quilting fills. It's the first time I've plugged a mouse into my machine. I used a magnetic hoop. The stitching in the sashing and borders is a variegated thread on my Sashiko machine. It does great hand-look stitching. So lots of new-to-me techniques on this quilt. This is all from stash including the variegated threads.

The first is the Christmas Tree Quilt I finished this year from Broadway Quilts' BOM.
It's for my Dad who is at Spring Lake Village.
Quilted by Trina
Jahnsen.

The second is the first Christmas quilt I made and which sits on my quite unique quilt stand. The Christmas Santa guards the quilt!

The third is a small Snowman wall hanging which just makes me smile. I bought a yard or so of this fabric, fussy cut the pieces and made them into several darling wall hangings for my family. Luckily I saved one for me!

I started it in August and could only use fabric from my collection of Christmas fabric. I had Merry Christmas quilted in rows going down the quilt. Good fun.

Christmas Wallhangings

The trees were going to be a quilt but I was looking for some gifts and realized these make pretty wall hangings. The Santa I made about 4 years ago in a class with Betty Upchurch.

This quilt is a friendship block quilt from a few years ago that members of the Guild help me make. As the red and white felt like the Holiday Season I thought this would be a great opportunity to show it and to once again thank those wonderful wonderful persons who worked on it.
